

I Drive a Truck

When President Obama and the democrats attacked Senator-elect Scott Brown of Massachusetts for driving a truck, the message resonated with the voters like “Joe the Plumber.” President Obama also attacked small-town Pennsylvania and other small towns in the Midwest when he said to a San Francisco audience “they cling to guns or religion...” The democrats simply do not get it.

For the last two weeks, I have been closing my emails with the following statement, “I am Jeff Wiita, I am a CPA, and I drive a truck.” This salutation has created quite a lot of positive feed back. People want to know what kind of truck, how many miles are on the truck, what color is the truck, etc.

Well, (with which President Reagan often started a sentence), it is a '97 red Chevy 4x4 Silverado with 194,878 miles and counting.

It has a bumper sticker that reads, GobalClimateScam.com. Need I say more?

It also has a magnetic ribbon that says, “Support Our Troops.”

I also cling to my guns and religion. Is there a problem with that?

I like my truck. No, I love my truck.

The magnetic red, white & blue ribbon says "Support Our Troops"

I also own a BOBCAT. Do you see it in the background? In the summer I do landscaping, and in the winter I plow snow for three neighbors and myself. How many other candidates for State Auditor own a BOBCAT?

State Auditor Rebecca Otto drives a Toyota Prius (Boo).

Domestic vs. Foreign. What a distinct advantage for the GOP in a general election.

CPA vs. Non-CPA. What a distinct advantage for the GOP in a general election.

The time for government accountability has come.

Sincerely,
Jeff Wiita, CPA
